This global competition invites machine learning enthusiasts, data scientists, and innovators from around the globe to develop solutions that address developing Universal Behavioral Profiles – user representations useful in multiple behavioral modeling tasks. Before joining, please review the Terms and Conditions below. If you do not agree to these terms, you should not proceed with registration.

The following terms govern your participation and participation of academic teams in the RecSys'25 Challenge Universal Behavioral Modeling Data Challenge ("Challenge"). These terms form a binding legal agreement between you as a participant and the Organizer with respect to the Challenge. For more detailed information about the Challenge, including objectives, datasets, and resources, please refer to the official website <https://recsys.synerise.com/> ("Website").

2. Requirements|

Organizer makes every effort, to ensure fair competition and compliance, the following criteria apply to all participants taking part in the Challenge:

a. Conflict of Interest:

- I. By registering for this Challenge, you confirm that your participation does not conflict with any agreements including employment contracts, intellectual property rights, or other obligations that might constrain your involvement or affect the integrity of the Challenge.
- II. Current officers, directors, employees, and advisory board members of Synerise, as well as their immediate family members and persons residing in the same household, are not eligible to participate.

b.Compliance:

- I. You are responsible for ensuring that you and your academic teams are legally eligible to participate in the Challenge under any local, state, national, or international laws that apply to you. It is your obligation to understand and adhere to any regulations or restrictions imposed by your jurisdiction.

3. How to register and participate|

Participation in the Challenge begins with a s registration process and adherence to the following participation guidelines:

a. Registration Process:

The Challenge's evaluation system will be hosted through the third-party open-source platform Codabench (<https://www.codabench.org/>), which requires participants to sign up and accept the Terms and Conditions (<https://github.com/codalab/codalab-competitions/wiki/Privacy>) and license Apache License, Version 2.0. <https://github.com/codalab/codalab-competitions?tab=License-1-ov-file#readme>.

b. Account Restrictions:

- I. Each participant can only create and use one account. Sign up must be completed using official contact information. Multiple registrations by a single individual are strictly prohibited and will result in disqualification.
- II. Each team should register only one account. A team should not submit solutions from more than one account.
- III. To avoid teams registering multiple accounts to the competition, each team will be manually accepted. To aid the organizers in verifying the legitimacy of accounts, please add as much information to your profile as you can.
- IV. Each team is allowed at most two submissions a day, which is facilitated through the limitation on the number of submissions per account. Even if a team circumvents Codabench's submission limits—whether by making more than two submissions per day from a single account or by using multiple accounts—they may be disqualified and removed from the Challenge.

c. Collaboration and Sharing:

- I. Participants are prohibited from sharing code or data outside of their registered teams. Code sharing is permissible if it is done openly on the Challenge forum, accessible to all participants.
- II. Team mergers are permitted and must be executed by the designated team leader. The merged team must not exceed the total submission count allowed, calculated as the product of the number of submissions allowed per day and the number of days since the first member of the provisional team joined the competition. The team leaders must notify the Organizer and it must have been done before the Challenge ends.

d. Submission Limits:

- I. Teams may not exceed a size of 10.
- II. Participants are limited to 2 submissions per day, only one participant from the given team is allowed to make submissions.

e. Professional Conduct:

- I. A high standard of professionalism and respect is expected from all competitors and must be maintained throughout the Challenge. Instances of cheating, plagiarism, or any other forms of unethical behavior will be grounds for disqualification.
